Remote hiring based on Mobile Applications

Abstract

The recruitment application that we plan to develop aims to facilitate the recruitment process and connect companies and individuals looking for job opportunities.

The application has two main interfaces:

1. Interface for requesting employees :

- It allows companies to publish job vacancies and their details clearly.
- Company owners are able to determine the skills and requirements required for applications
- It makes it easier for companies to receive and manage employment applications efficiently.

2. An interface for job seekers:

- Provides individuals with a database that includes available job opportunities according to their specializations and experiences.
- It allows applicants to easily submit their applications through the interface designated for job search.
- Provides a rating system for companies and feedback from applicants to improve the transparency of the recruitment process.
