Abstract

In the context of the extensive use of Internet technology, electronic recruitment sites are witnessing a revolution in recruiting researchers. For a job, she was able to increase her efficiency to the point where she could contribute effectively to hiring decisions. This medium has become tried and tested and has become an essential and reliable tool, relied upon by job seekers and employers as a main source used alone or as a supplement to traditional methods of recruitment. In this project, two portals were provided, the first for company owners to publish job vacancies and the second for people looking for work. Or job seekers. The importance of this service stems from the fact that it achieves the principle of transparency and justice in employment issues.
